GLASS HANDLING

Mechanical Impact

Whether it be a beer tap, silverware, or another glass, constant contact will cause invisible abrasions to occur, which will weaken the glass and increase the chance of breakage.

Thermal Shock

Sudden temperature changes produce stress in glass and can cause breakage. Therefore Glassware must be allowed to reach room temperature before placement in service.

Never pick up glasses in bouquets. Avoid glass to glass contact.

Never put silverware in glasses. Bus glassware directly into divider racks or sort items in bus tray.

Never stack glasses. Avoid glass to glass contact.

Avoid glass contact with beer tap.

Never use glass for an ice scoop. Use a plastic scoop for ice.

Never overload a bus tray. Dump ice out of glasses and then sort items in bus tray. Never put cold glasses into a warm dishwasher.

Remember that thermal shock is a result of a quick temperature change and cracks that occur from Thermal Shock usually appear along abrasions caused by Mechanical Impact. Never put a cold substance, (water or ice) into a warm or hot glass. Allow the glass to reach room temperature first. (The thicker the glass, the more time required to reach room temperature.)

Handle your glassware with care and know that you are increasing your profits.
